
1. How were presidential candidates expected to behave during the early years of the American republic? How did those expectations reflect political elites’ beliefs about democracy?

2. How did presidential candidates campaign differently beginning in the populist era (late 19th century)?

3. What kinds of presidential candidates were most successful during the electronic era (1950s to the present)? How did campaigns differ from earlier eras?