1. How have political scientists attempted to measure and study the causes of the growing polarization in American politics?

2. How have political scientists analyzed whether unified or divided government leads to greater congressional productivity, as measured by passage of important laws?